Adrian Monninger

Monday 2nd December, 2024

Abstract

This is the place where you should write your preliminary abstract (up to 120 words).

Part I

Content

Introduction

Here will be an introduction (3-4 paragraphs containing intro and research question/ explanation of topic/ literature review/ potential results)

Literature Review

This is the place where you should write your literature review. You can cite papers from your references [Bremus et al. \[2020\]](#).

Main Body

Here is the main body with a lot of code. Note that we out abstract, introduction, literature review, and conclusion in separate markdown files. With this, we can focus on code and data analysis in one file.

You can of course reference some other papers here as well, eg: [Hemmelgarn and Teichmann \[2014\]](#). All cited papers will show up in the bibliography at the end of the file.

import numpy as np
```

x = 4
y = 8
z = 0.5*x + y
print(z)
```

```
10.0

or in text: $x + y \rightarrow 10.0$

let's add something

Conclusion

Here you will conclude your paper.

Appendix

Here I want to have some additional regressions I do not want to put in the main body.
